

Abstract

The present invention provides a method of treatment of viral hemorrhagic fever with protein C. The claimed invention provides a needed therapy for a serious and debilitating disorder while avoiding complications such as bleeding tendency, toxicity and general side effects of currently available anti-coagulant agents.